

I understand the FCC is planning to expand the broadcast service, LPFM, in such a way that the LPFM stations would take priority over current FM translators. It isn't right to simply override an existing station and put it off the air in favor of a new station. I listen to K-LOVE, which I hear on FM 96.9 in the Dayton area.

This station provides a positive impact on radio listeners, especially teenagers who want to listen to music that isn't filled with violence, anger, sex and drug references, etc. I think it is in the best interest of the public to continue to allow stations like K-LOVE to air their positive music and message for those who listen. I have teens at home who listen to this station; I would much rather they listen to this than to other stations which broadcast the other kind of music which I have already described. If K-LOVE is taken off the air, there is one less positive influence for today's teens to listen to.

Sincerely,
Deborah Jenkins
